For Sarah & Alaina

Being differently different, isn't so different at all.

In a world made up of many things,
you may think yourself small.

But wings and queens and water springs,
live in you and let you soar.

You can be one thing and two things, and many, many more.

William Beale

Once there was a little girl named Sarah.
She had a BIG family.

Some of her family members lived in different countries than she did.
And she had to travel very far to see them.

Sarah enjoyed travelling to different countries.
She found it very exciting.

Some of her family members lived in Australia.

Some of them
lived in England.

Some of them
lived in Malaysia.

And some of them
lived in Singapore.

Her home.

Madeline Beale

Madeline Beale is a writer and a stay-at-home mum to two beautiful girls: Sarah and Alaina. In her spare time, she enjoys painting, cycling, a great coffee, and spending time with her family. Inspired by her daughters' loving upbringing from within their multicultural extended family, Madeline developed the Sarah series based on real experiences and her children's simple understanding that no matter what type of family you have or where you come from, the most important element is unconditional love.

Douglas Goh

Douglas Goh is a creative director trained in the dark arts of advertising and graphic design. He has won numerous awards in different creative fields all over the globe, and often enjoys doodling in his spare time. He does not consider himself an illustrator, but it was the opportunity to put the doodles he draws to good use that spurred him on to work on this series of books with Madeline.
